The Author

Nghia Trong Pham was born in 1978 in Vietnam. Nghia won his LLB degree and LLM degree (with high distinction) from the School of Law, Vietnam National University. He holds a doctorate in law from Brunel University, London, United Kingdom. His PhD research focuses on the incorporation of international labour standards into domestic law which made him the first PhD student from Brunel Law School to be awarded the Walduck Prize for Research Impact – a prestigious prize from Brunel University, United Kingdom.

In 2010, he was appointed a Deputy Director General of the Legal Department, Ministry of Labour – Invalids and Social Affairs, Vietnam and was one of the youngest deputy directors general of the Ministry. In 2012, he was promoted to the position of a Deputy Director General of the Department of Law, National Assembly Office, Vietnam.

Over the years, Nghia has managed to combine academic achievements with leadership at work. His work has continued to include human rights, labour rights legislation processes and trade negotiations in Vietnam. His research interests and publications cover a range of issues related to human rights, labour law, international labour standards and trade.

He is currently a fellow of the Oxford–Princeton Global Leaders Fellowship Programme (2015–2017). At Oxford University, the programme is run by the Global Economic Governance Programme co-hosted by University College and the Blavatnik School of Government. At Princeton University, it is run by the Niehaus Center for Globalization and Governance at the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs.

Acknowledgements

This project is informed tremendously by my work as a legal officer for the Ministry of Labour, Invalids and Social Affairs of Vietnam from 2003 to 2012 and the Office of the National Assembly of Vietnam from 2012 to date. I am grateful to the former and present Leaders and Colleagues at the Committee of Law, Office of the National Assembly, the Ministry of Labour, Invalids and Social Affairs, the Vietnam General Confederation of Trade Unions, the Vietnam Chamber of Commerce and Industry, and the ILO Office in Hanoi for their constant help, support and backing before and during this project.

I wish to convey my sincere thanks to the Vietnamese government for awarding me the 322 Project Scholarships (2007–2010) and the British government for granting me the Overseas Research Students Awards (2008–2010) that financially enabled me to carry out my PhD research at Brunel University, London, United Kingdom which enriched my knowledge and research skills for this project. Special thanks are owed to Professor Ben Chigara, my PhD supervisor at Brunel University, for his tireless support and encouragement.

I would like to express my great thanks to the Oxford–Princeton Global Leaders Fellowship Programme for giving me the opportunity to carry out this project in a wonderful academic environment. I am deeply grateful to Professor Robert Keohane, Professor John Ikenberry, Professor José Manuel Barroso, Professor Christina Davis, Mrs Patricia Trinity at Princeton University, Professor Ngaire Woods, Associate Professor Emily Jones, Associate Professor Thomas Hale, Mrs Reija Fanous at Oxford University for their guidance and support.

I would like to express my deep sense of gratitude to my grandparents and parents who have tolerated hardship and difficulty in their lives while raising and supporting me throughout my life. I am grateful to my parents-in-law, my younger brother, and all my family members and friends, who have given me a lot of support and encouragement.

Last but not least, I am particularly indebted to my son Kien Trong Pham (Carot), my daughter Khanh Bao Pham (Seoly) for their love, inspiration and encouragement, and to my wife Van Thanh Thi Nguyen for her love, caring, support and sacrifice. They are the sources of the spirit that has enabled me to finish this academic project. This book is dedicated to them.
